GO TO THE POLLS ON MONDAY JUNE 11!

Charges Thousands Of Germans TookPartInExterminationOfJews

Earl Stanhope, who was one of the British delegation to visit Buchenwald concentration camp, told the House of Lords: "Much the most painful thing that I saw was the condition of those who are still living." It was not the smallest use, he said, for a German to pretend that he did not know the general conditions of these camps. One of the first items of propaganda the Nazis used to put the Germans to go on fighting was to say to them: "If you lose the war you will be taken away for slave labour and put in a concentration camp."

Lord Vansittart, in a brilliant speech, quoted from a letter written by an Englishman who had lived long in Germany. "Those of us who were in Germany during the Nazi rule," he wrote, "and in close touch with all sections of the people, knew well that the brutal treatment of victims of Konzentrationslager, or K.Z.s as they were called, was a household topic throughout the country. We were told tale after tale from all sides. The Nazis themselves put it around as a dire warning to potential political opponents. The great bloc of their supporters knew all about the brutalities committed on Jews, Communists, and so-called non-social elements at Dachau, Oranienburg, Esterwege, and other K.Z.s. Many of them saw with enthusiasm and schadenfreude the disappearance of their trade competitors and political and social rivals into these foul camps and applauded with the feeling 'it serves the Jews right.'"

Lord Vansittart reminded their lordships that the bulk of the earlier inmates were Jews. He continued to read from the letter: "It all began on a large scale after the Reichstag fire. By 1938 I am sure there were few Germans who did not know that there were Jews, Communists and others in the K.Z.s being tortured. Apart from the K.Z.s being a topic of conversation in every family, how could people escape knowing? Were their children not in the Hitler Jugend or the Arbeitsdienst or the Bund-derfacher Madel and did they not know? Why should a parent say to its naughty child, 'be good or you will get into a K.Z.'? Was it not then the most dreaded punishment? Of course it was."

Describing the camps, Lord Vansittart said: "All signs of pity were verboten. Sometimes the local population in their off hours and on Sundays would come to peer and jeer through the wires and throw in bits of offal to see the skeletons scramble. And there is more than that. Many of these foreign prisoners and slaves were employed in factories, on the farms, and in the homes. And when we consider these things we must not forget that the entire German Army enjoyed the forced prostitution of women from all the occupied countries; that they worked these women literally to death, and even when they did not, when they had enough of them they murdered and replaced them. Nobody compelled the rank and file of the German army into that bestial pleasure. They knew well-enough what they were doing."

Lord Vansittart said he had already produced irrefutable evidence to show that thousands of just ordinary Germans took part in the extermination of three million Jews in Poland. They thought it was good sport. He suggested to the Government that so long as the occupation continued, January 30, the day of the advent of Hitler

Bill Of Rights Aim Is Equality For All

The provisions on human rights in the charter of the international organization now being established at San Francisco are a great step forward in the creation of a new world order in which Jews, like all others, will enjoy equal rights of citizenship, according to a statement by Judge Joseph M. Proskauer, president of the American Jewish Committee and the head of its delegation to the San Francisco conference.

The statement issued by Judge Proskauer and Mr. Jacob Blaustein, consultant and associate con-from San Francisco, reads as follows:

"Realising that the agenda of the conferences made possible the consideration of only a few of the problems directly concerning Jews as such, we concentrated most of our efforts as Americans and as Jews on bringing about a charter which would proclaim the equality of all people as one of the major purposes of the new world organization. That is why in San Francisco we have emphasized the question of human rights and urged that a Commission on Human rights be made an integral part of the charter. We carried on our work in this direction in close collaboration with other civic organizations, Jewish and non-Jewish, represented at the Conference.

U. S. Jewish Chaplains Number 267

Addition of forty-one Jewish chaplains to the Armed Forces of the United States, establishment of hospitality committees in liberated and occupied areas of Europe and development of increased facilities in the Pacific war theatre were announced by the National Jewish Welfare Board, Frank L. Weil, president.

These services, he said, are designed to bring spiritual comfort to the occupation forces, to the men who will be redeployed and to the American Armed Forces stationed in the Orient, Central America, continental United States, and elsewhere.

There are now 267 Jewish chaplains in the Army and Navy. The Army and Navy have requested an additional forty-one chaplains, reflecting an expanding need for the spiritual services which they render in the camps and in the field. In all areas under American control chaplains serve as links between the men and women in service and their families.

In addition, JWB is organizing Jewish hospitality committees in Europe and establishing lecture courses and study groups in Jewish history, current Jewish problems and Jewish aspects of [redacted] now in Europe organizing the program.

The JWB program will also be stepped up in the Pacific theatre. A new club house has just been opened in Manila, in charge of JWB's Philippines director, Morton I. Netsorg, who was released from Santo Tomas prison when General MacArthur's forces captured Manila.

While the organization is thus meeting the new situation caused by the shift of the war to the Pacific, JWB, through some 300 Jewish Centers and 825 Army and Navy committees, is cooperating with other groups to speed the orderly reabsorption of military personnel into civilian life. Likewise, JWB is caring for the needs of the Jewish wounded in General Hospitals and convalescent centers. Thousands of casualties are still to be returned from the European theatre.

Another activity which will be accelerated with the end of the European War phase is the veterans' service program, which handles claims for discharged service men and women, and ministers to the hospitality and religious

HELP GOES TO GREEK JEWISH SURVIVORS

The first list of 3,300 Jews in Greece who survived the German occupation was received by the Joint Distribution Committee, Dr. Joseph C. Hyman, executive vice-chairman.

During the first five months of 1945 the Joint Distribution Committee appropriated $500,000 for the relief and rehabilitation of the Greek Jewish community. Although exact figures are not available, hundreds of Jews who hid for years in mountain passes or who were interned in camps in Germany are now returning to Greece, bringing the surviving Jewish population of that country up to about 10,000.

The list was forwarded by Israel Jacobson, J.D.C. overseas representative in Athens. The J.D.C. has provided emergency shelters for homeless Jews, orphanages, a summer camp, equipment for a medical dispensary, and has supplied special assistance to community institutions, including synagogues and schools. In addition, the J.D.C. appropriated a special grant of $200,000 which provided small loans to heads of families for the purpose of reestablishing them in business and small-scale manufacturing.

Belsen Survivors Comfort British Chaplain

In the course of a letter to Louis E. Wigoder, of the Bnai Brith, of Leeds, England, the Rev. L. H. Hardman described some of the harrowing scenes he witnessed in the infamous concentration camp of Belsen.

"Since last November," writes the Rev. Mr. Hardman, "the prisoners were not given any kind of food except raw turnips. Some time in February, it was forbidden even to eat these. Anybody found eating one, even though it was a foul, rotting turnip found in the fields of the camp, was very severely beaten by the S.S. men and women. For four whole days prior to the liberation no manner of food or drink was allowed. Meanwhile typhus raged through the camp, which was some 16 square miles in area.

"On entering the camp, I smelt death, and the stench that rises from unwashed human bodies. Before being allowed to wander around, I was 'dusted' as a precautionary measure against typhus. This deadly plague could not deter

Hebrew University Expansion Will Link Palestine With All World Jewry

Accepting its post-war role as a "focal point of the creative powers of the Jewish people", the Hebrew University in Jerusalem, foremost institution of higher learning in Palestine and international centre of research, has adopted a comprehensive program calling for a capital outlay of $4,000,000 and an increase from $900,000 to $1,500,000 in its annual budget.

Approval of this undertaking was voted in New York by the directors of the American Friends of the Hebrew University. The society, one of twelve supporting organizations, is headed by Dr. A. S. W. Rosenbach, bibliophile and Shakespearean scholar. Albert Einstein, who presented the university with the original manuscript of his "Theory of Relativity," is chairman of its nominal council.

When Palestine was liberated in 1918, the first thought of the Jewish population was to found a university. The cornerstone of the campus on Mt. Scopus was laid while Allenby's guns were still in action north of Jerusalem. Formal opening was celebrated in 1925, with Lord Balfour as guest of honor.

In the last twenty years the university has had an extraordinary growth, largely because of insistent demand from students, especially those from Central Europe, and an influx of distinguished scholars and scientists after 1933. The original faculty of six, three of whom were visiting professors, has increased to 150.

The pre-war enrollment of 1,000 is expected to double in the next few years. To provide an organized campus life, particularly for [redacted]

[redacted] present shortage of young doctors will become acute in ten years. To meet this threat to national health, the university will organize an undergraduate school for pre-medical training. The medical school itself will be expanded and have additional clinical facilities at the Rothschild-Hadassah-University Hospital.

Confined at present to training teachers for secondary schools of the Yishuv (the Jewish community in Palestine), the university's department of education will be enlarged to serve the Diaspora (the Jewish community outside Palestine.)

To meet the growing demands of modern farming in the Near East, it will be necessary to treble the size of the school of agriculture. A school of economics and social sciences is contemplated to open up a new profession for young Palestinians in the civil service and similar administrative positions.

Other immediate needs include

German Freight Boats Asked For Palestine

A demand that Jewish Palestine be given a number of German freight steamships as a small compensation for what Germany has done to the Jewish people was voiced by Moshe Pearlstone, chairman of the Palestine Maritime League. "I WANT TO LIVE"

At a huge meeting which took place in the town of Drohobych soon after its liberation, children presented flowers to the generals whose troops liberated the entire Carpathian territory.

General Ivan Petrov, commander-in-chief of the Fourth Ukrainian Army was present at this meeting. He was surprised to see black bands around the arms of some of the children.

"Those are Jewish children", one of the teachers explained. "Their parents have been murdered in the Magurov camp. We rescued the children and kept them in hiding all the time."

"What's your name?" the general asked one of the boys. "Stasek," the little boy replied.

"His name is Chaimke," interjected the teacher. "But for three years he has been living under the Polish name of Stasek".

"From now on you may use your real name", said Gen. Petrov to Chaimke. "You are as free as I am, as we all are. Do you understand me?"

Turning to the teacher, the general asked: "How is he at school?" "Fine," replied the teacher. "He has been an excellent pupil thoughout the period".

"Take care of them," said the general. "Unfortunately only a few of them remain: thirty-five out of several thousand."

He then beckoned to a pale little girl to come over to him. "What is your wish? Tell me, don't be afraid."

"I want to live," the child answered, without much thinking.

Trade And Commerce In The Bible

By Samuel Landek

The Bible is perhaps the last place in which one would normally seek for trade reports, yet sure enough, therein are recorded many interesting facts concerning business transactions. In the Book of Genesis we learn that Abraham was rich, not only in the flocks and herds which he himself reared, but in silver and gold and ornaments of precious metal, and [illegible] and other goods in his transport. The caravan laden with spicery, which brought Joseph into Egypt, was an Ishmaelitish concern, and those who wished to purchase corn from Egypt were advised to "step and fetch it" — did not Joseph's brothers, engaged on such an errand, ultimately come?

The Hebrews, after the Exodus, were a self-supporting, peaceable, and somewhat unenterprising agricultural folk; but the far-sighted Law-givers, anticipating possibilities, laid down very strict rules for commercial morality (Deut. xxvii, 12; xxv, 13-16; Lev. xix, 35-36), at the same time emphasising that the more noble calling was that of the agriculturist. Notwithstanding this, King Solomon developed an extensive foreign trade. He imported from Egypt, [illegible] and horses and [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible]

Jewish Home In Jerusalem Has Welcome Thousands In Uniform

Thousands of American GI's and seamens who have spent furloughs in the Holy Land while stationed in the Middle East or with the Persian Gulf Command will in the years to come, when sentimental memories of their war service grow tender, remember one spot in Jerusalem which was to them a home. It was here they enjoyed the lavish, warm-hearted hospitality, the come-right-in-and-have-fun spirit, that have come to be associated with the word "American".

It all started about four years ago when American aircraft technicians working in Eritrea before Pearl Harbor "discovered" Palestine as a furlough resort. An American woman in Jerusalem, with two sons in the armed forces entitling her to display her own two-star service flag, met some technicians on the street and got to thinking how lonely it must be for the boys away from home and their families.

When the American Red Cross started up here, it was to find her famous parties, with home-made pies and trimmin's, in full swing. They got in touch with her and began sending truckloads of soldiers on furlough, ninety at a time.

"I did it because of my own boys," Mrs. Madeline Lewin-Epstein told me the other day, says Julian Meltzer, in the New York Times. "I know how they felt being away from home, and I hoped that some mother would help them the same way, too."

Her elder son, Lieut. Jacob Lewin-Epstein, now with the United States Army Dental Corps, recently married a Philadelphia girl. Her younger son, Capt. Noah Lewin-Epstein, is a fighter pilot with the United States Ninth Air Force in Europe. Both boys, born in Palestine, were studying at Michigan University when America entered the war.

Noah, then under draft age, wrote President Roosevelt and asked if he could waive parental consent because he was under the minimum age. "My parents are far away in Jerusalem and it will take some time to get their consent; but I can assure you, Mr. President, that they will agree", he wrote. He got the permission.

Madeline Lewin-Epstein and her husband, Dr. Samuel Lewin-Epstein, an American officer in the last war and now a leading dental surgeon in Jerusalem, came to the Holy Land in 1918 with the first American medical unit, precursor of the present-day Hadassah Medical system, he as a dentist, she as a nurse. They were married here and settled first in Tel Aviv, then in Jerusalem.

The Lewin-Epstein home parties, which actually began when Australian troops came to Palestine in February, 1940, soon became celebrated among American service men in all parts of the Mediterranean, Middle East and Persian theatres. At these they met local Americans, danced with pretty girl hostesses under Mrs. Lewin-Epstein's benevolent chaperonage, ate home-made cookies and cakes, and had another worthwhile experience to remember.

Thousands of appreciative letters have been received by Mrs. Lewin-Epstein from service groups and individuals in many theatres of war.

To the mothers of America, Mrs. Lewin-Epstein, to whom one appreciative United States bomber squadron sent a pair of silver wings as a souvenir, addresses this message through The New York Times:

"Many of your sons serving in the Middle East and spending their furlough in the Holy Land, have been visitors in our home in Jerusalem. We have had thousands of them and had the opportunity of hearing from them, how they feel about this war and what they are fighting for.

"In the atmosphere of home, these splendid men would relax and their topic of conversation would invariably be of mother, home and family. Though their longing for home was immense, they realized that to return home without accomplishing the task they set out to do, they would forever endanger the future of the America they so love. They are a credit to you and our country.

"My heart goes out to you, Mothers of America, and may God's blessings hover over these precious men, wherever they may be."

Student Set Yeshiva Fire

An 11-year-old boy, one of 300 students in the Mesitva Torah Vodaath, a Jewish theological seminary at 141 South Third Street in Brooklyn, N.Y., confessed to Chief Fire Marshal Thomas P. Brophy that he had started four fires in the institution in the last month.

The boy, whose name was withheld because of his age, made his statement, according to Mr. Brophy, after he had been questioned seven hours. He told the Fire Marshal he could not resist the excitement of hearing, watching and counting fire-fighting equipment in action.

Red socks worn by the boy led to his capture. Before the alarm was sounded for the last of the four seminary fires—it was set in a dormitory closet on the second floor at 155 South Third Street—someone saw a boy wearing red socks leaving the building.

The detectives learned that the boy had been a problem child, that he was expelled from a private school in Connecticut not long ago, after [illegible] He was committed to Kingston Hospital for observation. Mr. Brophy said, "I'm happy we were able to locate him before he started a fire which might have resulted in tragedy."

CANADIANS MUST CHOOSE

The Political policies of the King Government have created bewilderment, doubt and divisions among Canadians.

Where are we going? . . . Toward the rigid control of every phase of the National Life by the State? . . . Or toward new freedom and opportunity for the individual talents and ambitions of our people? In desperation, some are thinking of socialism. Well, socialism has been tried . . . by the National Socialists of Europe.

On June 11th, Canadians must choose. Canada must have a clear national objective. Confidence can only be restored by the full national program pledged by John Bracken, leader of the Progressive Conservative Party.

No other man in Canada is so well qualified as John Bracken to lead this country into a new era of freedom, security and opportunity. No longer will political trickery stalk the corridors of the Commons.

For 20 years, John Bracken remained undefeated as Leader of the Government in Manitoba. In that province of many creeds and many nationalities he maintained peace and unity. Now in the broader national field, that same tolerance, that same ability will restore unity and good government to Canada.

Canada needs a new leader. Canada has a new leader in John Bracken.

Chalutziuth: Road To A New Mode Of Life

By Zvi Garfinkle, Executive Member Of Montreal Hechalutz

Stationed in Palestine during the early years of World War II, were a group of New Zealand and Australian soldiers. They often had occasion to visit the many Kibbutzim and Kvutzoth (various types of Palestinian collectives) as well as the many other achievements of Jews in Palestine. Writing home of their visits and experiences they said of the Kibbutzim and Kvutzoth, "After the war we're going to establish Kibbutzim and Kvutzoth in our own countries when we get back."

Sir Arthur Wauchope, former High Commissioner to Palestine, wrote to England that he foresaw in the Palestinian collectives the way of living that could serve as an example to the rest of the world.

Chalutziuth is both the road and the mode of this new way of life that was able, in its purely Jewish expression, to appeal to New Zealanders and Australians, and to convince even a not-too-sympathetic British official of its worth.

It is hard in a few words to explain this great new civilization being built up; but its existence belies any cry of "utopian", "impractical", or denial, because its strong, honest ideals have too often been betrayed by our present social order. Chalutziuth has been and remains, after sixty years, a form of life based on co-operation and comradeship, and the human sympathy freely shared of young people who have voluntarily come together in pursuit of this great ideal.

It is not only for our own satisfaction and development that Chaluts Zionism calls. Today, we face the staggering need of bringing the remnants of Israel home, to where they can live and work, and partake in the rebuilding of their own homeland. It is to add strength and new life to this work that Chalutzim, young and eager, strong of body, and enduring in spirit, must come to Palestine. And it is to this task that the Chaluts of the "New World" dedicates himself.

The words of the great world Zionist leader, Chaim Weizmann, are clear: "In a few weeks I am going to America, where I shall explain what I have seen here and will try to stimulate a large-scale pioneering movement, since the U.S. (and Canada) remains our sole reservoir of manpower."

BILL OF RIGHTS

"As a result of these efforts, the charter will state that the World Security Organization is being created with a view to 'promote respect for human rights and for fundamental freedoms for all without discrimination as to race, language, religion or sex.'

"Responsibility for the discharge of this function will be vested in the General Assembly of the World Security Organization and the Economic and Social Council. This Council will set up a commission for the promotion of human rights. Secretary of State Stettinius, in a public statement, declared that the most important function of the Commission on Human Rights would be to prepare an International Bill of Rights which can be accepted by all the member nations as an integral part of their own systems of law, just as the American Bill of Rights has become an integral part of our system of law. We believe that this [illegible] the rights of Jews and all other minority peoples throughout the world.

"Besides recognizing the principle that there can be no peaceful world order without equality for all, the charter lays the foundation for an international machinery to deal with discrimination and inequalities. While it is premature to say definitely how these instruments will work in practice, it is our hope that the international organization will have power to investigate violations of human rights and recommend appropriate action. We also hope that the International Bill of Rights, to be adopted, will be so drafted as to give it real strength and effectiveness.

"At the same time, we realize that our work in this respect is really only a beginning. After the formation of the World Security Organization and the establishment of the Commission on Human Rights, it will be our task to present to it a concrete program for restoring Jewish rights everywhere.

"We are happy to express our appreciation of the support given us by the consultants of the other organizations represented at the conference and the efforts undertaken by the United States delegation in making the question of human rights one of the most important issues at the conference.

"The representatives of the American Jewish Committee have also informed the United States delegation and the State Department of our earnest desire that nothing shall be done at San Francisco which will impair the existing rights of Jews with respect to Palestine. The United States delegation has fully supported this request and we are happy to note that in the proposed trusteeship plan provision is made that the status of Palestine, guaranteed by the Mandate, will not be affected by the new arrangement.

"The representatives of the American Jewish Committee in San Francisco also proposed the creation of a Commission on Statelessness and a Commission on Migration. Detailed suggestions along this line were submitted to the Secretary General of the United Nations Conference, who acquainted all the delegations with their contents.

"It is our belief the Conference in San Francisco is laying the foundations for a world organization which can inaugurate a better world order. The spirit of the new charter augurs well for the security and equality of Jews everywhere. The instruments are being created. Let us work so that these instruments shall be used to improve the lot of the Jews everywhere and of all others."

me from going in to try and find, to speak to, and to aid in every possible way my languishing brothers and sisters.

"What I saw was horrible. I just couldn't stop crying over the terrible tragedy which had befallen so many human beings, murdered for no other reason than that they were Jews, or 'politically unreliable'.

"Walking on, I stood aghast when I saw coming towards me, like children learning how to walk, a group of living skeletons. Their bodies, from the tops of their heads to their toes, seemed no broader than the width of the five fingers of a normal human being. After having just seen the heaps of huddled corpses I exclaimed, with horror, 'My God! the dead are walking!'

"Even a hardened Brigadier of the Medical Service was so horrified that he, too, wept like a child . . .

"There are no such places as lavatories—not even camp latrines. In the centre of the camp was a large stone tank filled with water. In this the prisoners had to wash themselves and their clothes, and from it they had to drink . . .

"When General Sir Miles Dempsey, the Army Commander, was called in, he [illegible] amount, costing of one shower per evening, the complete staff of a casualty clearing station, to get thousands of loaves of bread brought in, and those who could still eat devoured their slices like ravenous wolves. Then minutes later many dropped dead with their shares still clenched in their hands; they had been too feeble to eat . . .

"I saw a young girl whom I at first took to be a Negress, she was so dark. Then I learned that back in Poland she had had her face smeared with boiling tar. Her skin was beginning to heal . . .

"I learned, at first hand, from the victims themselves, what had happened to—them in this camp, and also in Auschwitz and Treblinka, where they had been compelled to watch their babies thrown alive into the furnaces. They saw their own relatives shot, gassed, and brutally ill-treated.

"Many of the women were the wives of Rabbis who are no longer on this earth. We talked and talked, always keeping them smiling; in several cases we did not succeed. Some sang Hebrew and Yiddish songs for me, and when I began to cry, they comforted me. The candles I recently received were put to use at once. The married ones will be able to 'benach licht' this coming Friday night . . .

"What of the Jewish future? Is the Jewish Agency to continue to compromise and vacillate in regard to the vital urgency of opening the doors of Palestine wide enough to receive some 250,000? I would guarantee that any rabid Laski Zionist would come forthwith to ask for money and more money for Palestine. Enough of the back-scratching! Enough of dishing out banquets! Let us get down to hard work and save these poor wretches.

"'How right,' these women declared, 'was the late Jabotinsky, when he came to Poland, and demanding that, if necessary, the Jews be forced to leave Poland for Palestine!' How bitterly they cried when I recalled this.

"But what was the reaction of our Zionist leaders to Jabotinsky? They called him Fascist, anti-Semite, mischief-maker, etc., etc. I am not trying to provoke a Zionist discussion, but if anyone in Leeds had seen what I have seen, he, too, would say the same thing. Jews must not go back to Poland to live.

"At the moment, I feel as if my face had been encased in plaster of Paris, so stiff has it become. It will be a long time before I smile normally."

Lord Addison, who was one of the delegation, said that so far as he noticed the attitude of the Germans who were being made to visit the camps, he saw no indication whatever of shame. They no doubt regretted that they were defeated and were compelled to witness these things, but that was another matter. He thought it was really undeniable that the majority of the German nation knew sufficiently well what was going on in these places. It had been going on for 12 years or more. He considered that the Allied Nations must set up an organisation which contemplated the occupation of Germany and its deliberate re-education over a long period of years.

The Lord Chancellor (Viscount Simon) said that the Government entirely agreed with Lord Denham's description of the experiences of the German citizens who had been compelled to visit Buchenwald as salutary and educative, and they would be very glad if it was possible to apply the experiences in other parts of the country.

"Sometimes when people measure me,
I tell them without rancor
That for what it cost me to be free,

For some reason or other, the Review, although far from the scene of battle, has been included among those whom the Zionist Council Public Relations Committee, of Seattle, Washington, wishes to keep informed on the ructions that occurred there recently when Rabbi Elmer Berger, executive director of the American Council For Judaism, visited their city and established a unit of his organization. Moreover, the Public Relations Committee even adds, a little recklessly, that it would appreciate it if this column would comment in any way it sees fit and proper.

Well, it seems that ten businessmen of Seattle issued invitations to all members of the Jewish community to a public meeting to be addressed by Rabbi Berger of the Council For Judaism. Immediately, the Zionist Council asked the chairman of the meeting to permit two speakers of the Zionist group to participate in discussion after the Rabbi's address. After consultation with the Rabbi and his colleagues, the chairman refused to permit discussion but said that questions could be asked. Rabbi Berger is said to have invited a reporter from the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, the only morning paper there, for an interview and the result appeared in it. The account contained the following: "In America, for instance, we feel that a Jew should be an American first and a Jew afterward, just as another is an American first and a Protestant afterward.' He pointed out that this is diametrically opposed to the Zionist movement, which seeks to set up a separate Jewish nation in Palestine."

Do you feel the heat? The Zionist Council, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Sam L. Levinson, called a meeting at which there was unanimous agreement that Rabbi Berger's statement was a defamation of American Zionists and those American Jews who are in sympathy with the cause of Zionism. Representatives of all Zionist organizations hold the opinion that non-Jews must get the impression from the Rabbi's statement that Zionists regard their loyalty to America in second place to their loyalty to Zionism and Palestine. And that such a statement was in strict violation of the traditional principles of Judaism. A Public Relations Committee was appointed to release to the Jewish public, and, if necessary, to the public at large, any kind of material which would help to destroy the implications of the Berger statement.

The first step taken by the Public Relations Committee was to ask the temporary officers of the new unit of the Council For Judaism if they wished to retract from the Berger statement. The answer was no. So the Committee sent to the entire Jewish community of Seattle and its environs a letter and a photostatic copy of the press release by Rabbi Berger.

The letter is in crescendo style, with shrieks and screams denoted here and there by capitalized sentences and exclamation marks, over four signatures. It contains the following in part: "We are accustomed to attacks on the Americanism of Jews from non-Jewish anti-Semitic sources. We are shocked to find the American Council For Judaism resorting to the same tactics in the public press."

The photostatic copy of Berger's press release consists of pieces roughly torn out of the printed account in the Seattle Post-Intelligencer and mounted on a reproduction of part of a front page of the daily paper, with huge red arrows pointing to these scraps, and a wide red border at the top which carries in white type the following: "American Council For Judaism Defames Jews In Public Press."

The Public Relations Committee of the Zionist Council also prepared a release to the Transcript, the Pacific Northwest's community-owned monthly paper printed in English, but that paper would not publish it due to its controversial contents. The Committee then offered their material as paid advertising and it was accepted as such at first but was later rejected. At an open meeting of Seattle Lodge, 503, of the Bnai Brith, a motion brought to insist that the Anti-Defamation League take action on the Berger statement was carried by all against one vote.

The pay-off is contained in "Statements From The Seattle Zionist Council" which says: "A special meeting of the Seattle Zionist Council called by Mrs. Sam L. Levinson, chairman, resolved to launch an intensive educational campaign in the general and Jewish community and to utilize the aroused interest in Zionist issue for adding to the ranks of Zionists. We applaud the increased interest in Zionism which the Council For Judaism has stimulated in Seattle," declared Mrs. Levinson, recently elected president of the newly-created Northern Pacific Coast Region of Hadassah. "After Rabbi Berger's visit in San Francisco, over 1,800 men and women flocked to Zionist organizations to join as members. We hope to outdo San Francisco in proportion to our numbers."

On the same page there is an excited statement by the chairman of the Public Relations Council which contains several lines that were blacked out with crayon. On first thought they must have looked good, in the wisdom of the man qualified to be at the head of public relations. But when they were printed they did not look so good and might even have given grounds for libel if Rabbi Berger had wanted to make something out of them, perhaps.

This column has told the above story in detail so that you would get as much of the whole picture as possible under the circumstances because it concerns a matter of gravity and importance to every Jew, and because this is not the end but the beginning of something new in Jewish communal life, having nothing special to do with the local affairs of the Jews of Seattle, Washington.

For years the American Jewish community has been deeply divided over the Palestine question, into Zionists in favor of a Jewish state in Palestine, and non-Zionists or anti-Zionists or both, against a Jewish state anywhere. The Zionists did not ask the permission of the non-Zionists in the propagation of their cause. The struggle, which has affected all communal and organizational activity in some way or other, went on, for the most part, out of public view. Then, in the past couple of years, Lessing Rosenwald organized his American Council For Judaism which was not non-Zionist but aggressively anti-Zionist, and without asking the permission of the Zionists in the propagation of this undertaking. Feeling threatened, rightly or wrongly, in the security of their American citizenship by the aggressive activities of the Zionist Organization on behalf of Jewish nationalism, the Council For Judaism has been organizing units to oppose those activities.

Always differing, these two groups are now at an open impasse. Their differences are honestly held and may never be composed. However, something will have to be done to prevent or avoid a thing like the hysterical Seattle business if for no better reason than to protect people with weak hearts from their own anger. The main thing is that the Zionist Organization and the American Council For Judaism are probably here to stay and should try to get together on how to fight each other without ruining American Jewry.

It should [redacted] something practical about methods and the use of weapons, the public press, for instance. The practically new custom of running to the daily papers and being accepted as welcome copy, partly because it is a time when Jews are being subjected to minute scrutiny under a universal floodlight, should be taken under advisement for the good of the whole group, and as soon as possible.

There is nothing very simple about this whole situation and it is high time for men to come together from both sides and arrive at a few rules and regulations for combat. They owe it to the vast majority which will never join up with either side if they don't stop arousing so much bitterness in each other and so much general concern over the constant evidence of strife.

port a Jewish commonwealth in Palestine.

President Truman in a message expressed his "deep interest" in the work of the conference and wished it success "in all efforts to improve the condition of mankind in the post-war world."

Governor Dewey sent a message terming it a "tragic fact that despite the end of the war in Europe, and that the oppressors have been crushed, the destiny of the remnants of Polish Jewry is still uncertain and beset with grave difficulties." He added that there was an "imperative need for organized unity in planning reconstruction of the shattered lives of a people who have suffered so much."

Other messages came from Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of War; Bishop William T. Manning, Sumner Welles, former Under-Secretary of State; Gov. Dwight H. Green of Illinois; Gov. Walter E. Edge of New Jersey; Henry Wallace, Secretary of Commerce; Senator Robert F. Wagner, Senator Leverett Saltonstall, Henri Bonnet, the French Ambassador, and Albert Einstein.

Dr. Israel Goldstein, president of the Zionist Organization of America, declared that Britain must open the doors of Palestine to the Jewish survivors of the Nazi terror or brand itself as inhuman.

Other speakers were Representative Emanuel Celler, Mrs. Stephen S. Wise, Rabbi Samuel Bret, Elimer Kaplan, treasurer of the Jewish Agency for Palestine, and representatives of the Jewish press.

Dr. Simon Federbush, former chief rabbi of Finland and former member of the Polish Parliament, [redacted] deplored the lack of a Jewish delegation at San Francisco and declared that "only when we have the Jewish homeland in Palestine will we win the recognition and respect of other nations." S. L. Schneiderman, author, read a proclamation pledging support for the rehabilitation of surviving Polish Jews.

the doubling of laboratory space, new scientific equipment to replace worn-out apparatus, substantial additions in English for the library and expansion of the university press.

The contemplated opening of a School of Economics and Social Sciences will meet a need which has become increasingly acute with the progress of Palestine in general and of its Jewish community in particular. This school will train Jewish young men and women for Government civil posts and for Jewish national institutions and municipalities, as well as executives for public, semi-public, and private commercial, industrial and agricultural enterprises. The University will thus open up a new profession to young Palestinians. It seems probable that graduates of the school will also be called to serve in communal Jewish posts abroad. In addition to instruction there will be research in economics and the social sciences, with special emphasis on Jewish problems, and the problems of Palestine and of the whole Middle East. Palestine offers unique opportunities for economic and sociological research because of the heterogeneous immigration and the co-existence of modern and primitive economics.
